FOREWORD

To our already representative collection of incunabula, numbering upwards of 1,600 items, has recently been added, by purchase from Dr. Otto H. F. Vollbehr, a collection of 3,000 items, including a copy on vellum of the "42-line" Gutenberg Bible. The legislation appropriating funds for this purchase was initiated by a bill introduced by Representative Ross A. Collins, of Mississippi, and finally enacted and approved July 3, 1930. It reads as follows:

> That for the purpose of acquiring for the Library of Congress the collection of fifteenth-century books known as the Vollbehr collection of incunabula and comprising three thousand items, together with the copy on vellum of the Gutenberg forty-two-line Bible known as the Saint Blasius-Saint Paul copy, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,500,000, or so much thereof as may be recommended by the Librarian of Congress in an estimate submitted for the purpose.

The collection, considerable in extent, is especially valuable not merely for a study of the development of printing and the arts of illustration, but also for its subject matter in the various fields of learning represented; e. g., classical literature, philosophy, theology, history, geography, law, science, music, and numerous educational treatises. A large portion of the items are in the vernacular languages of Europe.

Of the 3,000 items in the collection, it has been possible to include in the present exhibit only about 1,700, and the following list is no attempt at a catalogue even of these, but merely enters the author, short title, imprint, a bibliographic reference, and the exhibition number.

In the arrangement of the exhibit some consideration has been given to the subject matter. On the cards placed by the books in the exhibit cases will be found free translations of the titles and in many instances descriptive notes.

HERBERT PUTNAM,
Librarian.
